Career Talk

Zahra Hakimi

Visiting Researcher at Centre for Research on Health and Nursing (CRHN) at uOttawa, Canada

Zahra Hakimi is a researcher and lecturer in the field of health sciences. Her academic background includes obstetrics and medical physiology. She earned an M.Sc. from Mashhad University of Medical Sciences (Iran) and has two years of experience as a university lecturer in the Department of Physiology at the Ghalib Faculty of Medicine in Afghanistan. Prior to that, she taught for 16 years in the obstetrics departments at the Institute of Health Sciences in Afghanistan.

In this Career Talk, Zahra takes us on a journey through her academic and personal life: from her many years as a researcher and lecturer in Afghanistan to the moment when, from one day to the next, everything changed. With the Taliban's takeover in August 2021, women were increasingly pushed out of public life, deprived of their fundamental rights, and severely restricted in their freedom and self-determination.
